Important Moments in My Career Apart from My Current Job

Colleagues and friends often ask me about the key moments in my academic and professional life, aside from my current role. Here are the most significant ones:

- Earning my PhD from Loughborough University in the UK in June 1991.
- Becoming a full professor at Salford University in April 1999.
- Serving as President of the Chartered Institute of Building in June 2014.
- Receiving an honorary doctorate from Loughborough University in July 2016.

While I find my previous jobs and my current role very rewarding, these moments stand out for me because they represent important achievements and recognitions in my career.

"Don't worry when you are not recognized, but strive to be worthy of recognition." -Abraham Lincoln
