Collaboration Over a Memorable Dinner in Downtown Beirut

Last night, I had the distinct pleasure of accepting an invitation to dinner in Downtown Beirut from the esteemed President of the Lebanese University, Professor Bassam Badran. He is not only an inspirational leader but also a dedicated scholar and researcher who has made significant contributions to the academic community.

During the evening, we were joined by Dr. Ashwin Fernandes, QS Executive Director for the Middle East, Africa, and South Asia, and Prof. Bassam Alameddine, FRSC, President of Gulf University for Science and Technology in Kuwait. Our discussions centered around exploring opportunities for collaboration between our institutions, focusing on how we can enhance educational experiences and foster innovation in our respective fields. The conversation was rich and engaging, highlighting our shared commitment to academic excellence and global partnerships.

It was a night filled with insightful dialogue and the promise of future collaborations that can benefit both our universities and the broader community.
